
A Message from the Dean

Learn the expertise and cooperation of nursing and welfare based on the spirit of human care.

The School of Nursing and Social Services aims to develop professionals who understand nursing and welfare comprehensively and have the spirit of human care. Therefore, our curriculum is structured in a way that allows students to learn about "human beings," "the environment," "health," and "practice" as areas that are shared between nursing and welfare professions. Further, in the subject "Introduction to Nursing and Social Services," students of the Nursing and Social Work Practice courses have the opportunity to discuss the birth, aging, illness, and death of human beings together.

Kumi Mikuni, RN, PHN, D. NSc.
Dean

For people who live in the local community, it is important that health, medical and welfare services are provided without division between them. In today's world where Interprofessional collaboration is regarded as important, human resources who have the spirit of human care that is shared between the fields of nursing and welfare, and are able to seek the ideal way for both fields to cooperate while demonstrating the expertise of each respective field will be greatly sought after in the future.

Kumi Mikuni, RN, PHN, D. NSc.
Dean, School of Nursing and Social Services