A Message from the Dean

We provide specialized education for mental health care.

Now that the scientific foundation of the mind has been defined, the question of how it can be restored to individuals and our society is currently being asked. To answer this question, so-called grounded assessments and support are needed. At the School of Psychological Sciences, we look forward to admitting all of you who have the ambition to tackle this issue head-on.

Tadaaki Tomiie, Ph.D.
Dean

In Japan, the first system for the national qualification of "Licensed Psychologist" in the field of clinical psychology was launched in 2018.

The School of Psychological Sciences has also been offering a curriculum that allows students to acquire the national qualification. Students are able to take the exam for the national qualification after obtaining the required credits at the undergraduate level and proceeding to the master's program at graduate school, or after gaining at least two years of work experience in clinical practice. Our school demonstrates the strength of being a part of a comprehensive medical university, and provides a fulfilling range of medical subjects such as medical science. For this reason, we have sent many human resources to the fields of health care and medical care. However, our graduates have pursued career paths that cover various fields such as civil servants, welfare facilities, and general companies, and are making good use of what they have learned in the Department of Clinical Psychology.

At the present time where people's spirits are exhausted and their bonds are being questioned, strive to become a professional/expert who is able to contribute to society with the "calm mind and warm heart" that you have learned from HSUH.

Tadaaki Tomiie, Ph.D.

Dean, School of Psychological Sciences
